Learning Objectives

After this presentation, you should be able to:

1. Identify and avoid common legal or ethical issues that can occur when creating, delivering or using intellectual property as a UF/IFAS employee.

2. Assess potential legal or ethical risks that can come about when moving traditionally face-to-face activities online.

3. Know the resources available to you for managing intellectual property and handling copyright questions or issues.
Key Terms

• Copyright: the exclusive rights granted by law to the copyright owners for protection of their work

• Copyright license: an agreement where the copyright owner maintains ownership of the rights involved but allows someone else to exercise some or all those rights.

• Plagiarism: taking someone else’s work and passing it off as your own (also, self-plagiarism)
Key Terms

• Fair Use Doctrine: the doctrine that brief excerpts of copyright material may, under certain circumstances, be quoted verbatim without the need for permission from or payment to the copyright holder.

• Classroom Use Exemption (17 U.S.C. §110(1)) allows instructors in non-profit education institutions to perform or display copyrighted materials during face-to-face teaching activities.

• The TEACH Act (2002) Extends the classroom use exemption for distance education. Limited to mediated instructional activities delivered to a specific class of enrolled students.
Information Landscape

Copyright at UF/IFAS

- UF/IFAS publications, blog posts, web content, etc., are intellectual property owned by the University of Florida.

- As a UF/IFAS employee, using UF/IFAS content (even your own) improperly in support of your work, while it may not be illegal, can raise issues of plagiarism or academic dishonesty.

- Refer reasonable external requests to use UF/IFAS intellectual property to IFAS Communications – even if you created it.
Criteria for Granting Permission to Reproduce or Reuse UF/IFAS IP

1. There is no impact on commercial potential of the work itself or any technology being described in the work;

2. There is no adverse impact on the work itself; and

3. The requesting organization is of acceptable integrity for association with the University.
Fair Use Doctrine

Permits unlicensed use of copyrighted materials for things such as criticism, comment, news reporting, teaching, scholarship, and research.

Four factors:
1. How you are using it?
2. Nature of the copyrighted work?
3. How much of it you are using, and how important that part is to the original work?
4. What effect will your use have on the value of the work?

CC-BY-NC
Recording video of yourself, live-casting lectures, etc.
If it was legal in-person, it is likely legal for restricted audience

- Course websites limited to enrolled students
- Posting a recording on a (private) course website
Audio or Video

Classroom Use Exemption allows playing from physical media, not streaming

• Limit to brief clips included in lecture recording (fair use)
• For longer content, have students access independently outside lecture.
• For more information: https://guides.uflib.ufl.edu/copyright/video
Posting to YouTube

• Post to secure server where you can control who accesses it
• YouTube
  • use your UF Google account
  • the same basic legal provisions apply
  • may encounter automated copyright enforcement
  • Use privacy settings
Course readings and other resources
It's always easiest to link!

• Publicly available content
  …unless it looks like it is obviously infringing copyright

• Licensed subscription content through UF library

• Florida Electronic Library for county audiences:
  https://www.flelibrary.com/
Sharing copies

- Downloading then uploading files
- Scanning physical documents
- Don’t copy whole works – a portion (fair use)
- If you are not sure, look for alternative content
Multimedia viewing / listening

- UF Libraries licensed streaming video content (https://guides.uflib.ufl.edu/copyright/video)
- UF libraries streaming audio content
- Standard commercial streaming options like Netflix, Amazon, Hulu, and Disney+ may sometimes be the easiest option.
Simple Steps that Lower Risk

- Link to content
- Limit distribution
- Limit the time
